TOWN LANDSBERG a.LECH

Mediaeval old Bavarian town at the Romantic Road; 18000 inhabitants; not far from the Bavarian castles of Ludwig II, monasteries, mountains and lakes. The historical salt trading town has taken care to preserve its unique monuments. It has magnificent profane and sacral buildings, well preserved defence walls, as well as powerful towers and gates.

Witnesses of the former power and importance of the town in the Middle Ages are the triangular Main Square - one of the most beautiful old Bavarian squares - coupled with the imposing rococo facade of the Old Town-hall, with the Fountain of Mary, the Beautyful Tower (called Lard Tower), the magnificent churches and the Bavarian Gate - the most splendid of all Gothic gates in Upper Bavaria.

Besides rich art treasures the visitor finds numerous places for relaxing, such as shady parks at the river Lech; a newly developed Park plentifully stocked with fallow deer, roe deer, wild sheep and wild boars; a modern outdoor swimming complex with an artificial wave-pool; a Sport, Youth and Recreation Centre and an extensive network of walking alleys and cycling paths.

Landsberg is a culmination point of the Southern part of the Romantic Road attributable to the typical Bavarian atmosphere, coupled with its reasonable priced hotels and restaurants, which make the visitors feel quickly at home and thus ensure that a stay in this area is rewarding.
